The airfield at Sochi (43°35'N/39°43'E), Krasnodar Krai, was located about 150 meters west of the Sochi river, southwest of the railroad bridge and about 80 meters north of the railroad line. The field, about 800x1,800 meters, was bordered by low rising hills on the north, east, and west; a river was to the south. A wooded area was about 800 meters north of the field. The landing field was sodded. There were no runway, taxiway, or hangars. Three small buildings were located in the center of the southern section of the installation. A small tower with a wind cone was observed on top of the easternmost building. No aircraft were stationed at the field. There was intensive traffic by large commercial planes. Small courier planes repeatedly landed at the field. The installation was not fenced or guarded.
